Assistant Attorney General Edgerton on Tuesday filed a motion in the supreme court for a rehearing in the William Flago case. Flago was convicted in Dixon county and sent to life imprisonment for the murder of his sister. The supreme court reversed the judgment and on a second trial in Thurston county Flago was convicted of manslaughter. This judgment also was reversed by the supreme court, principally on the ground that Attorney A. R. Davis, who assisted the county attorney, could not properly be employed as assistant prosecutor because he had appeared as a prosecutor of Flago at the preliminary trial. The court also ruled that the garments worn by the murdered woman at the time she was killed were inadmissible. To these rulings the attorney general's office takes exception.

They have 9 children living, 32 grand children and 14 great-grandchildren. Work has begun on the long discussed river dike road. This road starts in the First ward of South Sioux City, Neb., and runs west along the bank of the river for a mile or more. It will furnish a road into the city for a number of families living in that vicinity, and will act as a protection to that part of the city during high water. Stone left by the government from the re-vestment work done there last year will be used to protect the river levee of the road. The remainder of the expense will be born by Dakota county and the city of South Sioux City. The county board voted $200 for the purpose, and the city $100.

Sioux City Journal, 24: Trials of the city council of South Sioux City encountered in attempting to let a contract for the construction of a $25,000 waterworks system were brought to a stop last night by service of an injunction. The council had no chance to begin the work planned for the evening. Coupled with the city officials is the National company, of South Bend, Ind., represented by J. F. Cole, who has been employed by the city as superintendent engineer and, according to contract, is to receive a 10 per cent commission. Both city officials and the construction company are restrained from taking any further action on the letting of a contract for a waterworks system until the hearing shall be had in the Dakota county court. The hearing is set for June 25. The injunction was issued by Daniel Heffernan, county judge, yesterday afternoon, and was served at 8 o'clock by Sheriff Frank Mahon, just as the councilmen had taken their seats. In the petition for injunction, signed by John Jenkins, carpenter and property holder in South Sioux City, irregularities in the relations of J. F. Cole to the city and irregularities in the proceedings taken thus far are alleged. It is alleged that Cole as superintendent engineer had no right to place a "cover bid" under the laws of the state; that his bid was exorbitant, and that it was illegal to have the bids tabulated in Sioux City, out of the state where they had been opened. A crowd of South Sioux City citizens which the city hall could not accommodate had gathered to see the outcome of the waterworks question and the stormy proceedings of Friday night. They had not come in vain, for, stopped from taking action, the council allowed speech making. Both Mayor William Morgan and Cole talked. Mayor Morgan declared briefly that the council was doing all it could to get a waterworks system for the city and that there was absolutely no foundation for any imputation of graft or irregularities. Cole denied in his speech that the compensation he was to receive was too high. "It is not net profit but gross profit that 10 per cent means," he said. "Any contractor would take the 10 per cent if he could get it. I'm not such a black sheep as some people try to make me out. I've never been arrested. "No, but enjoyed," came a voice from the back of the room. After consideration, he would not resign his position as city official, declared John Bartlett, city engineer, last night. "I shall stick with the boat and see the fight through," he asserted.

H. H. Buckwalter, of Chicago, is visiting his son, Frank B. Buckwalter. Twenty-five members of the Journal chapel and friends yesterday attended the sixth annual picnic and gathering at Crystal Lake, Nebraska, and returned late last night. Athletic contests, bathing and boating and an old style picnic dinner at noon formed the day's entertainment. What was to have been the feature of the day, a baseball game between the married men and single men did not materialize. The bachelors declared that the benedicts violated the articles of agreement at the last minute. A game between the Journal aggregation and a team representing the Crystal Lake campers was substituted. The Journal contingent defeated the Crystal Lake nine by the score of 5 to 3. The Journal lineup was: Len Darville, pitcher; James Bach, catcher; Charles LeMaster, first base; Fred Hoffman, second base; Bert Hoffman, third base; R. Ward, short stop; Harry Adair, center field; Edward Ashby, right field; and Edward Kasper, left field. The individual athletic contests were featured by a wrestling match between John Lundke and Jean Downs. Lundke won two out of three falls. William Hall, who had previously challenged the winner to either a wrestling match or boxing contest, was unable to attend the event. Tony Perazzo, of Dickinson, undertaking establishment, was arrested Saturday night for exceeding the speed limit while driving a motor car through South Sioux City. He was fined $25 by the city judge. The arrest was the culmination of Perazzo's delinquency to get a city of young women back to Sioux City before 9 o'clock, the hour set for them to be at their homes. Perazzo was between two fires, the entreaties of four young women, who were pleading with him to drive "just a little faster," and the harsh voice of the newly appointed South Sioux City motorcycle policeman who commanded him to "halt, in the name of the law." Choosing between a sense of chivalry and respect for the law Perazzo finally yielded to his civil governor and insubordination. The party had gone to Crystal Lake for an evening's outing and motor car ride. The smooth surface of the lake appealed to the romantic nature of Perazzo's guests. They demanded a boat ride. Perazzo, in the role of the gondolier, perspired for half an hour rowing the young women about the lake. Then one of them happened to think of the mandate issued to them earlier in the evening by their parents, to get back to town before 9 o'clock. In the excitement Perazzo lost one of the oars and had to paddle the craft back to the landing with one oar. Consultation of a timepiece disclosed that but thirty minutes remained to make the trip back to Sioux City. Urged by the sighs of the young women Perazzo opened the throttle. Things were going fine until the "pop pop" of the motorcycle policeman was heard in the rear of the machine. "You're under arrest for speeding," declared the policeman. Perazzo argued in vain with the officer to let him drive the young women back to Sioux City and appear in court later. The policeman averred that it was a fine evening for the police that they thought he was "just too hot for anything." "Can't help it ladies," he replied, "this here speeding has got to stop, while you city folks drive through our town."
